CLOSING SALOONS.

IF THE county commissioners, sitting as a "liquor board" under the new law, can take away the licenses of four saloons, they should not hesitate at any half-way measures, but close every saloon in town. Without exception the men conducting saloons confess they have allowed patrons to play cards for money without any concealment of the fact. This playing was done openly, and often in the presence of officers who did not complain or suggest abandonment of the pernicious practice until about thirty days ago, when a few men were cited to appear and show cause why their licenses should not be revoked. This naturally suggests the question of why there should be any discrimination. Why were three or four men penalized for an act shared by others? Was it because they were more guilty or the conduct of their games was more flagrant than others? There must be some good and valid reason which has not been presented to the public, which will insist on knowing all the facts and hearing the testimony adduced to convict one set of men while allowing another set of men in the same business, who say they are equally culpable, to go free and operate their saloons without any interruption or protest.

It is even intimated that card-playing for money stakes has been indulged in as recently as Monday night, and it becomes a question where the saloon men are going to get off. To permit gambling in one house and close another for the same offense implies a discrimination not contemplated by the law, and the commissioners might take a day off to sift this matter to the bottom, with a view to placing responsibility.

OCCUPANTS OF GLASS HOUSES.

TWENTY thousand stockholders mourn the collapse of the Los Angeles real estate boom, involving $5,000,000, and the post-office department is sitting up and taking notice. If the inspectors paid one-half as much attention to the real estate sharks of California as they do to mining operations there would be less cause for criticism. From all evidence it appears that, while the inspectors were chasing alleged wildcats in the mining states, one of the greatest swindles of the age was put over right under the noses which were elevated so high they could not smell the scandal. It should be borne in mind that these real estate sharks were among the worst knoekers of Nevada, as they went on the theory that every dollar invested in mines was a dollar taken from their hungry clutches. Tonopah can challenge comparison with any legitimate investments.

San Diego is going to be ready for the exposition six months ahead of the opening date. This is an assurance that will come with pleasing surprise to thousands who struggled through mud, lumber, bricks, mortar and unfinished displays at previous efforts in this direction by such cities as Chicago and St. Louis. Seattle was the best prepared exposition, and the example of that burg seems to be contagious on the Pacific coast. Now let San Francisco wake up and show what she can do in the way of accelerating progress.

Mexico ranks a close second with the Balkan states for barbarity. The perpetration of these crimes against humanity would be sufficient justification for intervention. But it is a toss-up which is worse—Huerta or Carranza. The massacre of surrendering garrisons is repugnant to the instincts of civilization. It is a brave man who fights for his flag against overwhelming odds, and his bravery should win the esteem of his foes.

Las Vegas is prying itself on the fact that the Pullman company has named a sleeping car after that town. The Las Vegas Review says: "The whole world is now sitting up and taking notice of Las Vegas." That's nothing. The Pullmans christened one of its rolling palaces "Tonopah" ten years ago, and there is only one Tonopah.

Yankee tars are having a royal time in Europe as a sort of holiday before they are called on for warlike business nearer home. The American sailor is always popular, as he is a spender and has the coin in his trousers to tempt the beggars and poets of the tourist courts on the Mediterranean. Money talks.

President Bush of the Western Pacific is flirting with the farmers of northern Nevada, with a view to securing rights for railroad construction. If he would only renew his inquiries into the advantages of a southern outlet he might find a nice proposition in Railroad valley.

"For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain the heathen Chinese is peculiar," wrote Bret Harte in the early days of the yellow invasion. The same thought may apply to the present day, when hundreds of Chinese are surrendering to Uncle Sam on the Mexican border that they may be deported free.

Ogden blackhanders have taken an example from the Pankhurst contingent by committing their operations to the direction of a woman.

Raise the embargo on arms and let them fight it out, is the consensus of opinion along the Rio Grande border.
